This is very likely to happen if disease has been the cause of amputation, but may result from the inflammation consequent upon injury or amputation; this complication would create an important difference; a completely stiff finger is a serious obstacle and ought to cause unfitness in a recruit, as being not only useless but in the way, materially interfering with the appliances of the hand. Contracted fingers are altogether objectionable; they unfit a man in nearly every relation to his duty, weakening the hand, causing awkwardness, and impeding him almost universally. I am aware that the fingers enumerated as admitting of amputation the flexor tendons. Did this affection not produce very great contraction it might escape detection, under a cursory examination; yet it should always disqualify, since it usually ends in the complete contraction of the finger or fingers upon the palm. One side of the birdoon rein passes over the fore finger, between it and the thumb; the other passes round the outside of the little finger, the bite resting in the palm, except when a man rides on the birdoon; then one side of the rein passes between the little and ring finger of the right hand; an additional reason why the perfection of the right hand is necessary to a dragoon, as he may at any time have a horse he cannot ride on the bit. The bit reins pass, one side between the ring...
